God, who is wise and good, has chosen to give us this freedom of will, the ability to make our own choices. And so, it is our choice, not God's as to whether we will choose to do good or evil. It is our choice as to which one we let prevail. Thus, we must use our gift of free will wisely. Jesus suggests in today's gospel that the best use of free will is free service. Christ tells his apostles that those who wish to be important must become servants. But, in order to know how best to describe this wisdom, through the virtues it demonstrates, namely, being peaceable, lenient, docile, sympathetic, impartial, and sincere.

If we seek the wisdom, of God and do our best to be servants, then most assuredly God's goodness, made manifest in our actions, will triumph and darkness will be dispelled by the light of Christ. God is forever presents us, and thus we know that God will always be there for us whenever we might call. We must be present to God and to God's will if the reign of God is to appear in our midst. Therefore, let us do our best to be servants, for it is our Lord's will that we do so, in order to conquer the evil that we encounter, in imitation of Jesus, our brother and our friend.
